The events which have sprung out of the French Revolution, have produced such a change in the political condition of Europe; and these events succeed each other with such rapidity, that we have found it necessary to add an Appendix to our Work; that we might bring the History of Europe to as late a period of time as possible. ENGLAND. THE liberal policy of the English ministry, of which the late Charles James Fox was the leader, induced them to endeavour to remove, or to lessen, the obnoxious tests and disqualifications which for a long time had deprived the state of the services of a very large proportion of its people, the Dissenters and the Roman Catholics. After the death of that illustrious statesman, his colleagues proposed to introduce a bill into parliament to this effect, and submitted an outline of it to the king for his opinion. His majesty, considering that his assent to the passing of such a bill, would be a violation of his coronation oath, which obliges him to preserve undiminished the privileges of the church, of which he is the constitutional head, and believing his ministers were attempting to entrap his conscience, gave the measure his decided disapprobation, dismissed its authors from his councils, formed a new ministry, and by dissolving parliament, appealed to the sense of his people for the rectitude of his conduct. The new parliament accordingly met on the 22d of June, 1807, but...
