Marcus O Malley is the brown-nosing suck-up everyone despised in school. He also happens to be Ireland's best known barrister who truly has it all: a beautiful runway-model wife, two perfect children, prestige, power and wealth. When he refuses a dangerous villain's request to defend him of heinous crimes, Marcus is rightly intimidated. A seemingly random opportunity to run for political office pops up and only as means to save him from the threats does he decide to dive in. With his reputation as a do-gooder, Marcus takes like a duck to water to the local scene and his meteoric rise through the party's rank begins. But as he sets his sights on becoming Prime Minister, he must cooperate with unsavory colleagues, bide time and determine what's best for him versus what's best for the party. Could outside forces bring him down, ruin his career and potentially send him to jail? Can he play the game in the shark-infested waters of Irish politics?...
